Research Interest
Genetic differentiation between the subspecies/species results in various forms of reproductive barriers. Such genetically based barriers lead to reproductive isolation, which prevent gene flow between populations. Reproductive isolation is both the indicator and a primary force of speciation, playing a key role in maintaining species identity. The major interest is reproductive isolation and population differentiation in rice, which is in close relationship with utilization of heterosis in hybrid rice. The research areas include functional genomics, evolution and population genetics.

Huazhong University of Science and Technology, Wuhan, China.

Positions Held:

Nov 2015 – present Professor, College of Life Science and Technology, Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, China.

Jan 2013 – Nov 2015 Associate Professor, College of Life Science and Technology, Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, China.

Mar 2012 - Mar 2013 Visiting Scholar, Department of Ecology and Evolution, The University of Chicago, Chicago, USA

Mar 2011 - June 2014 Research Associate, National Key laboratory of Crop Genetic Improvement, Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, China.

Mar 2009 - Dec 2012 Lecturer, College of Life Science and Technology, Huazhong Agricultural University, Wuhan, China.
